Abstract

During the Civil War the 24th Michigan Infantry mustered into federal services in August of 1862. They trained in Detroit for two weeks before leaving to Washington D.C. The regiment was assigned to defense of the capitol initially until joining other regiment to create an all western brigade for the Army of the Potomac. The 24th joined other brigades and ultimately fought in Gettysburg, then later served as military escort for President Lincoln's funeral procession.

Scope and Content

The 24th Michigan Infantry / Plymouth in the Civil War record group consists of records related to the United States Civil War, such as newspaper articles, registers, service records, rosters, flags, death records, and other related documents. Many documents in the collection are duplicated from parts of a National Archives collection as well as from archival collections in Ann Arbor and Canton, MI. The majority of the collection dates from 1862 through 1887. Items with more current dates are largely reflective articles about the War.
