Abstract

Jack Wilcox was a member of the Plymouth community who was born and lived in Plymouth his entire life. He passed away in June 2000. In 1980 he created a charitable trust in hopes that his estate could be of benefit to his hometown. The trust would later become the Wilcox Foundation. During his life, not only did he serve his country in World War II, he served on many boards and committees in the community. His house on South Union Street, built in 1903, is now a historic location.

Scope and Content

The Jack Wilcox WWII collection contains letters written to and from Jack Wilcox during the second world war. The majority of the letters are written by Jack Wilcox to Mrs. G. H. Wilcox, Renaldie D'Haene and Mrs. Hugh McLaughlin. The remainder of the documents include a few newspapers from the WWII time period and keepsake items such as menus, playbills and posters, and some announcements.
