Abstract

Plymouth High School was originally built on the northwest corner of Main Street and Church Street in the early 20th century. The district later deemed the original building outdated for high school use in the 1970s and built a new school that would later be known Plymouth-Salem High School. In 2002, a new Plymouth High school was built on Beck Road and the older building became known as Salem High School.

Scope and Content

The Plymouth High School Records are composed of records covering yearbooks and newspapers created within the school. The yearbooks cover years ranging from 1913-2004. The newspapers date from 1946 through 1962. The collection also consists of commencement materials from 1881-1958. The commencement materials include programs, invitations, banquet menus and newspaper clippings. Class photographs from 1909 until 2005 are included in the collection. These photos include some images from Plymouth-Salem, Plymouth-Canton, and Canton classes. Other images found in the collection are related to school life, such as sports, classes, individuals and buildings. The final element of the collection consists of alumni association records with directories and information on various reunions.

Entry 1: The Plythean Student Yearbook

This collection of The Plythean, a school yearbook put out by the Plymouth Junior-Senior High School and later the Plymouth High School, spans the academic years 1913-2004. The yearbook was published annually. Sometimes the publication has different names, such as The Seniorite and The Mayflower, and only contains information about the seniors for that year. Yearbooks from the mid-1970s on are from the Plymouth-Canton Education Park and did not always bear the name Plythean. Below is a listing of the yearbooks included in this collection. The accession number follows each item, in parentheses.

Entry 2: Pilgrim Prints Student Newspaper

This collection of Pilgrim Prints, a school newspaper put out by the Plymouth High School journalism class, spans the academic years of 1946-1962. The paper was published generally on a bi-monthly basis in the early years and then on a monthly basis later, but there was no set schedule and occasionally there were additional issues. There are inconsistencies with regard to volume and issue number, but disregarding the inconsistencies it appears that there may be some missing issues. Below is a listing of the issues included in this collection. The volume, number, and date are as exactly as shown in the masthead. The accession number follows each item, in parentheses.
