Abstract

The Plymouth Historical Society was organized in 1948 with 52 original members. By 1987, the membership had increased to 400 and in 2005 the membership was about 700. The Plymouth Historical Society Museum opened its doors to the public on 14 February 1976, and an addition was completed in 2001.

Scope and Content

The Plymouth Historical Society record group consists of records related to the business functioning of the Society as well as records related to the functioning of the Plymouth Historical Museum. Many of the more recent record of the society are restricted and researchers should consult an archivist for further information. These records include financial and legal documents. Those records that are not restricted include meeting minutes, correspondence, and constitution and by-laws. Records for the museum include guest sign-in sheets, exhibit history, photographs, newspaper articles and other similarly related materials.
